Did you know that you can create and maintain your own web page --and that too without having any knowledge of HTML or Java or any other difficult language?

All you need to do is to open FrontPage 98 and move ahead on your brand new creative journey.

Written in very lucid style with beautiful illustrations its dialogue boxes and screen shots further add to its charm and readability.

Starting with a comprehensible description of the FrontPage 98 it goes on to unfold the mystery of a new web page creation and management.

The tasks have been made further easy with the a lot of eye-catching colourful illustrations with fine technical details.

Reader can easily visualize each instruction or example through dialogue boxes and screen shots.

It begins with a simple question of what is Front Page and chapter after chapter describes all the functions and special features of this highly user-friendly software package.
